Consistently providing efficient and convenient luxury, while maintaining the highest standards of sustainable building and innovative design; ensuring that clients live large with less

ABOUT WHEELHAUS

VISION

Live large with less – this is Wheelhaus' primary goal. Building and manufacturing tiny homes since 2006, we aim to consistently provide efficient and convenient luxury, while maintaining the highest standards of sustainable building and innovative design.

With a wide array of tiny house designs to meet all the clients' needs, we prefab all our homes off site and deliver the finished modular cabin to your desired location, while keeping convenience and efficiency our main priority. Using computer-assisted machinery, we are able to manufacture products with very high quality product and with low tolerance for error. This machinery also helps us achieve our Gold standard with the U.S. Green Building Council (USGBC).

Today, Wheelhaus continues to design and innovate for newer models with the continued trend of using the most current materials, while maintaining focus on green building and energy and space efficiency.

Jamie Mackay, founder and chief executive officer of Wheelhaus, was raised in Jackson Hole, Wyoming. His father's experience working in log cabin construction instilled in Jamie at a young age the value of quality construction that is built to last. This, in turn, drove him to create the next generation of cabins, with keen focus on providing the same quality and durability as the log cabins he grew up with. That said, Jamie made sure that he incorporated the importance of green production and modern design.

Jamie's conscientious efforts resulted in Wheelhaus, a company committed to sustainability with cabins that are a blend of rustic and modern and inspired by the durability and quality craftsmanship of a classic log cabin. Wheelhaus blends these classic ideals with a modern focus on energy efficiency, innovative design, progressive space management, sustainable building practices, and top-of-the-line building materials. These methods help Wheelhaus to exceed the requirements for the Gold standard with the U.S. Green Building Council.

Over the years, Wheelhaus Tiny Homes has been featured in several media outlets and publications. These include Outside, Forbes, Huckberry, TIME, Mountain Living, Gizmodo, HGTV, Uncrate, and The New York Times. Additionally, Fireside Resort Jackson Hole has also been featured in publications including Condé Nast, Sunset, and USA Today.

THE WHEELHAUS LEADERSHIP TEAM

Jamie Mackay
President / Founder,
Wheelhaus Inc.
Fireside Resorts Inc.
Mackay Developments, Inc.

As the president and founder of Wheelhaus, Inc., Fireside Resorts, Inc. and Mackay Developments, Inc., Jamie Mackay possesses strong business acumen encompassing all aspects of business management. As a passionate management professional and entrepreneur, he has demonstrated a proven ability to direct and grow the business into a highly profitable and successful organization.

Jamie has spent most of his professional career in Teton County, Wyoming, working in various sectors of the real estate market which include real estate investment, development, construction, and project management. He founded Teton Heritage Landscaping, a landscaping business specializing in design and development of major land planning and landscaping projects throughout the states of Idaho, Montana, and Wyoming. Prior to selling the organization, he successfully grew the enterprise from a single employee lawn maintenance contractor to a multimillion-dollar landscape and excavation company with more than 70 employees.

Afterwards, Jamie focused on developing and managing other local projects, while acquiring a real estate license at the time he was involved in more than $70 million in real estate transactions for buyers and sellers. Utilizing his interpersonal relationship skills, Jamie established relationships with third parties for ground-up developments from start to finish. In turn, he has successfully managed projects from startup to completion by engaging with major engineering companies, land surveyors, land planners, contractors, and government officials, I have successfully managed.

Currently, Jamie shifts his focus on the hospitality industry with the acquisition and development of Fireside Resort-Jackson Hole and Fireside Resort-Buffalo Valley along with the pre-fab construction business of modular cabins and homes. He designed and built the first Wheelhaus cabins that are featured at the Fireside Resort-Jackson Hole property that he currently owns and operates.

Furthermore, he built his own cabins with an initial phase of 23 cabins at Fireside Resort-Jackson Hole. The feedback from the customers was overwhelmingly positive, so much that it launched Wheelhaus into the national spotlight as a premier tiny home and pre-fab modular builder. Finally, under Jamie's leadership, Fireside Resorts has experienced a twofold increase with a near-100% increase in net operating income over the last two years. On the other hand, Wheelhaus has seen substantial growth over the last few years with the manufacturing shop in Salt Lake City, Utah, and the recent expansion to a 50-acre site in Idaho Falls, Idaho.

Wesley "Wes" White
Vice President
Wheelhaus Inc.

Mr. Wesley "Wes" White is the vice president of Wheelhaus, Inc. His wide breadth of expertise is underscored by a successful career spanning 16 years of experience real estate development, construction, sales, management, and finance across several real estate sectors. Upon graduating from the University of Georgia, Wes began his career in real estate sales in the North Georgia Mountains and in Denver, Colorado.

Prior to his career with Wheelhaus, Wes worked in the mortgage securities industry with a large bank and was later hired by Jackson Hole Fireside Resort in Wyoming in [Year] as [specific job title]. In this role, he was in charge of the acquisition investment, project management, development, and disposition of a real estate portfolio. This comprised of a wide variety of office, retail, and mixed-use commercial projects; as well as single-family and multi-family residential and condominium developments. The next seven years that followed saw Wes expertly managing all aspects of a $100-million real estate holdings portfolio for a private group. Additionally, in the last few years in the role, he efficiently handled the acquisition, development, and disposition of one of the larger and most recent residential subdivision build-outs in the Jackson Hole Valley. This project, in turn, provided 65 modular homes to the local market.

In 2014, Wes joined Wheelhaus, Inc., wherein he provides effectual support to Jamie in managing the growth, expansion, sales, and operations of the company. Moreover, as part of the Wheelhaus team, he plays an instrumental role in growing the Fireside Resort brand with the build-out of Fireside Resort-Jackson Hole and the future Fireside Resort-Buffalo Valley. As a result of Wes's significant contributions, Wheelhaus has experienced remarkable growth in the past few years.
